PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Greetings: you all there.

The Monson Historical Society will be having an open house at 87 Main Street on May 21st from 1 to 4 in celebration of National Preservation Month. Many of you will know this home as Holmbrook, which was built by Cyrus Holmes. You will get a chance to see the restoration work both inside and out which has taken place since the tornado.

Also, the gardens on the property at 4 Ely Road, the old First Congregational Church Parsonage, will also be available for tours. Refreshments will be served. Check out more information about this program further in this newsletter. I hope to see

It's also renewal time of the year for membership renewal. For postal patrons, check your mailing label; for email recipients, check your email message. Refer to the last page for instructions to see if you are current or need to renew.

Mission Statement

To obtain and preserve historical data and articles pertaining to the town of Monson, Massachusetts, and to encourage and develop the pursuit and expression of such interests in all suitable ways.

WHAT USED TO BE THERE?

By Dennis and Mary Swierad

Have you ever driven by an area in town and wondered what used to be there, what the buildings looked like, or just what was the history of that area? We are going to try and give you some idea of what one area in town looked like.

The place we are going to explore is 56 Main Street. Currently this is the new building between Maria's Pizzeria & Seafood and New England Estate Pickers.

You would not know it today but at one time, this was quite a bustling place.

In 1796, William Norcross built a tavern on this site. The tavern was a stopping place for stages running between Springfield and Worcester and horses were changed there. The stage horn was blown some miles away to announce the hour at which it would arrive, and the number of passengers who would want meals. Reuben Underwood, a stage driver, sometimes would appear at the door just before the time for starting and, with a pail of water in his hand, would jump over a span of horses. In conjunction with the hotel, there was a large livery stable, and horse and carriages were available for rent for a number of years.

William owned the tavern until 1803 or

1804 when it was kept for upwards of forty years by his son Amos. During this time, when Monson Academy was in its infancy, boarding students lived here.

“Uncle Amos”, as he was called, was an ideal host. The story of a sleigh ride in 1830 has been told many times. It was a perfect night and the snow was well-packed. Everyone in town who could go helped to make up the party. Belchertown was the objective, but the travelers returned to partake of one of “Uncle Amos” famous suppers. Nothing was lacking, even to blackstrap. After supper came a dance in the hall which lasted nearly until daylight. One can only envision the dance party thrown by old Fezziwig, a character in Charles Dickens’ A Christmas Carol, happening in Monson.

Uncle Amos (Fezziwig)

Monson had, in those days, an artillery battery of 64 men, which at the time was the oldest battery in the state. Two pieces, captured from the British, were sent to Boston after the battery disbanded in 1845. Trainings were frequent and a dinner at Uncle Amos’ was the crowning event of the day.

The hall was a gathering place for the townspeople. It was used for many functions and by many organizations, one of which was the Thomas Lodge of Masons.

After Amos Norcross, it was kept by Lucius E. Truesdell, who ran it under the name of Monson Hotel. Lucius was the village postmaster and kept the Post Office in the north corner of the building. It was also used by the temperance cause for a long time.

A stock company next operated the tavern. This company included Daniel G. Porter, William N. Flynt, Stephen Tobey and Charles B. Jones. These men hired one manager after another, the number included one Hastings, Deacon Aiken, Daniel Needham Green, Elias Paul, Amasa King and Nelson F. Rogers.

As a point of interest, after the train station was erected in 1857 on Washington Street, there was a public sidewalk developed from what would have been the rear of the Hotel down to Washington Street. This made for easy access for the guests of the Hotel. This sidewalk remains to this day.

About 1858, the property changed hands again to Harvey H. Park and John Thayer, at which time it was referred to as Park's Hotel and also had extensive alterations done.

In 1872, it came into the possession of Daniel G. Green. For two years, the hotel was used as a tenement house and Mr. Green decided to restore it to its original use. When reopened, it was known as Green's Hotel, but Mr. Green did not assume its management until 1876. It is said that while Daniel Green was owner, no liquor was ever sold. When a person asked for a drink, Green would hand him a glass of water. In 1884, it was sold to Leonard G. Cushman and re-named Cushman's Hotel. After his death, it was managed by his son, George L. Cushman, until it was bought by Lyman & George Flynt and Ralph Clifford.

In 1896, after a thorough renovation, Mr. Clifford assumed management and it was that year that it received the name Century Hotel. By the turn of the century, William N. Flynt Granite Co. took over ownership, with Fisk G. Rogers as manager. After several years, Lyman C. Flynt became sole owner.

In 1922 the building was purchased from Lyman by Dr. Frank G. Maguire who converted it to apartments. He later sold it to his brother Jesse, who operated it until a fire severely damaged the structure. It was razed in 1959 by Robert E. Chaffee, a local house wrecker. And so ended the life of the building which stood for so many years as a center of Monson activity.
